Preface

In 1978, the R.R. Bowker Company listed about 35,000 books which were published in the United States or distributed here by agents of foreign publishers. These titles, cataloged and listed in the twelve monthly issues of the American Book Publishing Record (BPR), have been compiled according to Dewey Decimal Classification. The Weekly Record and the American Book Publishing Record were produced from records stored on magnetic tape, edited by computer programs, and set in type by computer-controlled photocomposition.

The entries were compiled from books submitted to the R.R. Bowker Company by U.S. publishers and by authorized American distributors of current works published in foreign countries as well as information from the Library of Congress on MARC* II tapes. Not included in these listings are federal and other governmental publications, subscription books, dissertations, new printings (as distinct from reprints, reissues, and revised or new editions), quarterlies and other periodicals, pamphlets under forty-nine pages, and specialized publications of a transitory nature or intended as advertising. Although the UNESCO definition of a book as a nonperiodical publication of forty-nine pages or more (not including the covers) is strictly observed in the statistical count of books published, books and pamphlets with fewer pages are listed when the subject matter is deemed to be of sufficient interest or value to merit public attention.

Entries represent cataloging prepared by the Library of Congress, except those marked with an asterisk (*) which were prepared by the R.R. Bowker Staff. Entries without collation are Cataloging in Publication (C.I.P.) data for which completed L.C. cataloging was not received before this edition went to press. Preliminary C.I.P. entries and Bowker-cataloged entries have been replaced by full L.C. cataloging where possible. Entries reflect the new ISBD (M) † cataloging which introduces a new system of formal punctuation as well as a number of other changes. A full explanation is supplied in the Relevant sections of Part I of the Anglo-American Cataloging Rules (AACR) — 2nd ed. as well as in other professional publications. Briefly, the ISBD format divides the monographic bibliographic description into seven areas (1) title and statement of authorship, (2) edition, (3) imprint, (4) collation, (5) series, (6) notes, and (7) ISBN, binding, and price. On the Library of Congress printed cards, each of these areas is divided from the following by a period-space-dash-space (. —) unless the paragraphing and/or topography clearly delineate them. In the BPR Cumulative entry, this period-space-dash-space convention will not be used. Additionally, the ISBN-binding-price area has been positioned after the Library of Congress call number(s), secondary Dewey number (if present), and card number.

Entry information includes: main entry, title (in italics), subtitle, author statement, publication place, publisher, publication date, collation, series statement, general note or contents note, LC Classification number (in bracket), Dewey Classification number, LC card number, price, and tracings. New or obscure publishers' addresses are added when necessary. The ISBN (International Standard Book Number) is recorded for each volume (where one has been assigned), and in multivolume works and variant editions the volume, edition, or part to which each number applies is identified. Up-to-date price information is given when available. When not specified, the binding is cloth.

This volume is arranged in four sections with author, title and subject indexes in the back. The main section consists of nonfiction titles filed in numerical sequence by Dewey Classification numbers, followed by adult fiction and juvenile fiction sections arranged by author. In the author and title indexes, reference to the main section is given by the first nine digits of the Dewey Classification number. Those entries which will be found in the Fiction and Juvenile Fiction sections are referenced in the author and title indexes by a section code, i.e., FIC and JUV respectively with the author's last name in parentheses.

*Machine Readable Cataloging (MARC).
†International Standard Bibliographic Description for Monographic Publications

The prime marks within the Dewey Decimal Classification numbers divide those numbers into segments. An example would be as follows: 796.3576'-4'0924. This service was initiated by the Library of Congress to enable libraries that find some Dewey Decimal numbers too long for their purposes to cut the numbers logically without having to assign the task to professional persons.

The Subject Guide following the Title Index is arranged alphabetically by traced initial subjects, initial proper names as subjects and initial uniformed titles. It is designed to show corresponding initial dewey and Library of Congress Classification numbers for each traced subject represented.

For the most part the Subject Guide reflects Library of Congress Subject tracings used in this 1978 edition of the Annual BPR, and have been updated to conform with the Eight edition of Library of Congress Subject Headings and its supplements. The corresponding Dewey numbers used reflect the 18th Edition of the Dewey Decimal Classification schedules. However, some entries particularly annual editions, or reprints whose initial volumes were classified under an earlier schedule, have not been revised but appear under the number originally assigned.

The Weekly Record, ($15.00 a year U.S.A.) for merly a section of Publishers Weekly and now a separate publication is published in 51 weekly issues a year. The monthly American Book Publishing Record published monthly ($23.00 a year U.S.A.) cumulates the Weekly Record into a monthly publication. Both these publications are the original source material for the annual BPR.
